CLASSES

Scientific and Literary

The Library aims to help those who wish to help themselves in self-improvement. Educational classes are conducted for this purpose. The only tuition required is membership in the Carnegie Library Club.

In the Mechanical Drawing class the work is of the most practical character. The technical points that usually occupy time in a class of this kind are omitted. Every effort is made to have the student become proficient in the useful phases of the subject. Mr. A. W. Soderberg, the instructor in this class, is the assistant mechanical engineer in the Homestead Steel Works and has conducted this class for several years. The outfit used in this class will be furnished at $4.50 and up.

The class in Common Branches including practical arithmetic, grammar, geography; spelling, reading and writing will be taught by Prof. C. C. Marshall of the Homestead High School.

The class in Higher Branches including higher arithmetic, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, physics, also, will be taught by Prof. Marshall. The lessons in these classes are taught on the plan of individual instruction. A student may advance as rapidly as he is able.

The Metallurgy class will be conducted on the lecture plan. A syllabus will be given of most of the lectures so that a student missing a night will have an opportunity of keeping up with the class. While a knowledge of chemistry is an advantage it is not necessary, to be able to understand most of the lectures.

If sufficient interest is manifested a University Extension course may be established. This will be a fitting supplement to the educational classes and the study clubs.

A class in which foreigners may learn English will be organized later in the season.

Music

The Carnegie Library Band is under the direction of Mr. John P. Jones. Free concerts are given each month in the Music Hall during the winter season and in the band stand during the summer. The band is composed of thirty members and is open for engagements at reasonable prices.

The Symphony Orchestra also contributes towards the free musical concerts given during the winter.

The Junior Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Thomas H. Jones, furnishes an excellent opportunity for amateurs to play in concert.

The Male Chorus this year will be directed by Paul Peters Reese the well known baritone. The voices will be selected and only those coming up to a fixed standard will be admitted.

Finally the Children's Chorus which will be under the direction of Miss Evalyn Laffer, the director of music in the Homestead Schools. This chorus has the effect of concentrating the picked voices in the public schools in concert work that not only benefits the children but entertains the public once or twice each year.
